WEEK ENDING THURSDAY.

June 17, 1875. COMMERCIAL EPITOME - No mportant change has taken place during the week in the condition of business affairs, and the markets generally throughout have been duli and devoid of any features of special interest. -Speculation in every branch of trade is dormant, and business is confined to supplying the immediate wants of consumers, but there is the usual amount of business going on, considering the season, and the volume of trade has been as large as could reasonably have been expected. The naval store trade for the week has remained almost entirely in its former quiet position. Towards the close of the week there was a little. spurt of activity in the crude articles but the advance did not amount to much. Cotton continues to go down. In this line of business there is scarcely any trading going on. Only small lots of the lower grades being taken occasionally for home consumption.
